Helpful tips! Guide to Japanese manners

At a restaurant ...

Order food for the number of people!

People may wait in line in front of the entrance of many facilities, fareboxes on buses or ticket gates at train stations to present or insert their ticket. It is said that Japanese people love to wait in line. Actually you will see a very long line of people waiting in front of a popular restaurant or shop. You cannot cut in line instead of waiting in line. People line up quietly and wait their turn in Japan.

At a hotel buffet ...

Take as much food as you can eat and finish them all!

Many hotels offer buffet-style breakfast or dinner. Take the food items of your choice on your plate and have a seat at a buffet. Use the serving utensils (chopsticks, knife, fork etc.) provided for each item when you help yourself. Take smaller portions and do not fill your plate with lots of food at once. You can return to the buffet station as often as you like. Overloading your plate or taking more food items than necessary are considered as bad manners.

Wait in line!

If there is a line, join the end of the line and wait your turn!
